NEW QUESTION: 1

You execute the following query:

Which statement is true about the usage of these hints in the query?

- A. The optimizer pushes the join predicate into the inline view.
- B. The optimizer performs a join operation first and then filters out the rows.
- C. The optimizer evaluates the subquery as a first and then filters out rows.
- D. The hint will have no effect because one of the join resultsets is an inline view.

Answer: A

Explanation:

The PUSH_PRED hint forces pushing of a join predicate into the view.

For example:

```
SELECT /*+ NO_MERGE(v) PUSH_PRED(v) */ *
FROM employees e,
(SELECT manager_id
FROM employees
) v
WHERE e.manager_id = v.manager_id(+)
AND e.employee_id = 100;
```

When the PUSH_PRED hint is used without an argument, it should be placed in the view query block. When PUSH_PRED is used with the view name as an argument, it should be placed in the surrounding query.
