NEW QUESTION: 1

The principle measure of non-diversifiable risk included in the CAPM formula is the beta coefficient. The beta coefficient measures the volatility or risk inherent in an investment by:

A. Computing the ratio of percentage changes in a stock's price to percentage changes in overall market values during the same period.

B. Computing the ratio of stock price to earnings per share.

C. Computing the ratio of changes in earnings per share to changes in sales.

D. Computing the ratio of percentage changes in the expected value of alpha equivalents to derivative fluctuations.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Choice "c" is correct. The beta coefficient represents the measure of a particular stock's percentage change compared to the percentage change in the market over the same period. The equation for the beta coefficient is as follows:

% in Stock Price

% in Market price

Choice "a" is incorrect. The percentage change in earnings per share related to a percentage change in sales represents the degree of combined leverage.

Choice "b" is incorrect. The ratio of stock price to earnings per share is the price earnings ratio.

Choice "d" is incorrect. Choice "d" represents a word salad distracter of nonsense terms.
