Which three steps are required to enable ODP.NET clients that connect to the GL service to receive FAN High Availability Events?

- A. Link client applications with the client thread or operating system library.
- B. Enable Advanced Queuing notifications by using SRVCTL as shown in the following command:
$ srvctl modify service -d prod -s gl -q TRUE -j LONG
- C. Execute the following statement for the users that will be connecting by way of the .Net Application, where user_name is the user name:
EXECUTE DBMS_AQADM.GRANT_QUEUE_PRIVILEGE('DEQUEUE', ' SYS.SYS$SERVICE_METRICS',
user_name);
- D. Enable Fast Connection Failover for ODP.NET connection pools by subscribing to FAN High Availability events. Do this by setting the HA events connection string attribute to true at connection time.
- E. Enable Transparent Application Failover (TAF), either on the client or for the service.

Answer: B,C,D

Explanation:

Enabling ODP.NET Clients to Receive FAN High Availability Events
Perform the following steps to enable FAN for ODP.NET clients:

Enable Advanced Queuing notifications for a service by using SRVCTL as shown in the following example:

```
srvctl modify service -d crm -s odpnet.example.com -q TRUE
```

Grant permissions on the internal event queue table by executing the following command for the users that will be connecting by way of the ODP.NET application, where user_name is the database user name:

```
EXECUTE
```

```
DBMS_AQADM.GRANT_QUEUE_PRIVILEGE('DEQUEUE','SYS.SYS$SERVICE_METRICS', user_name);
```

Enable Fast Connection Failover for ODP.NET connection pools by subscribing to FAN high availability events. To enable FCF, include "HA Events=true" and "pooling=true" (the default value) in the connection string, as shown in the following example where user_name is the name of the database user and password is the password for that user:

```
con.ConnectionString =
```

```
"User Id=user_name;Password=password;Data Source=odpnet;" +
```

```
"Min Pool Size=10;Connection Lifetime=120;Connection Timeout=60;" +
```

```
"HA Events=true;Incr Pool Size=5;Decr Pool Size=2";
```
