NEW QUESTION: 1

The configuration on an ERS 8000 contains a static route, the output from a show ip route info (CLI) command or the routing table output on EDM does not display the destination network configured in the static route. What could be the reason for the remote network not being displayed in the IP routing table?

- A. The next hop address configured in the static route is not reachable.
- B. An accept policy is required to activate static routes.
- C. Static routes are not displayed in the routing table.
- D. The remote network is down.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION: 3

You are designing a database table for a client.

You have the following requirements:

Maintain a comprehensive list of colors and their corresponding RGB values and hexadecimal values.

Prevent the addition of duplicate colors based on the hexadecimal value for the color.

You need to recommend a design for the table.

Which two actions should the client perform after the table is created? Each correct answer presents part of the solution.

NOTE: Each correct selection is worth one point.

- A. Create alternate keys for the table.
- B. Configure and schedule a recurring bulk record deletion job.
- C. Mark the RGB value column as business required.
- D. Mark the hex value column as business required.

Answer: A,B

Explanation:

B: Setting a column to Business Required means that the default behavior of a model-driven or canvas app will enforce this requirement in the app.

C: With alternate keys you can now define a column in a Dataverse table to correspond to a unique identifier (or unique combination of columns) used by the external data store. This alternate key can be used to uniquely identify a record in Dataverse in place of the primary key. You must be able to define which columns represent a unique identity for your records. Once you identify the columns that are unique to the table, you can declare them as alternate keys through the customization user interface (UI) or in the code.
