NEW QUESTION: 1

The EMP table contains these columns:

You need to display the employees who have not been assigned to any department.

You write the SELECT statement:

```
SELECT LAST_NAME, SALARY, DEPARTMENT_ID
FROM EMP
```

```
WHERE DEPARTMENT_ID = NULL;
```

What is true about this SQL statement?

- A. The operator in the WHERE clause should be changed to display the desired results.
- B. The SQL statement displays the desired results.
- C. The WHERE clause should be changed to use an outer join to display the desired results.
- D. The column in the WHERE clause should be changed to display the desired results.

Answer: A

Explanation:

The operator in the WHERE clause should be changed to display the desired results. There are times when you want to substitute a value in place of NULL. Oracle provides this functionality with a special function, called NVL(). You cannot use operation equal with NULL, but you can achieve desired results using NVL() function after the WHERE clause.

Incorrect Answers

A: The SQL statement will generate an error because you cannot use operation equal with NULL.

B: The column in the WHERE clause should not be changed to display the desired results.

D: Since there is only one table used in this query you don't need to use outer join to display the desired results.

NEW QUESTION: 2

Which of the following is an example of an early cloud adoption?

- A. Data center

- B. Web email
- C. Virtualization
- D. Video streaming

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION: 3

Which of the following description about SMURF attacks is correct?

- A. Attacker sends SYN packets with source and destination addresses for the IP address where the attacker is. A SYN-ACK message is sent to their own address, so is the presence of an attacker hosts a large number of air connections.
- B. An attacker can target where to send a UDP packet in the network. The source address of the packet is being attacked. Host address, destination address are in the subnet broadcast address where the attack host the subnet network address using destination port number 7 or 19.
- C. An attacker using a network or host receives an ICMP unreachable packets, the packets destined for the follow-up of this destination address directly considered unreachable, thereby cutting off the connection to the host destination.
- D. Attacker sends ping requests to a subnet (broadcast), requesting that devices on that subnet send ping replies to a target system. Once the host or network is detected, it is then brought down.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION: 4

Which of the following would be the MOST significant audit finding when reviewing a point-of-sale (POS) system?

- A. Frequent power outages occur, resulting in the manual preparation of invoices
- B. invoices recorded on the POS system are manually entered into an accounting application
- C. Customer credit card information is stored unencrypted on the local POS system
- D. An optical scanner is not used to read bar codes for the generation of sales invoices

Answer: C

Explanation:

It is important for the IS auditor to determine if any credit card information is stored on the local point-of-sale (POS) system. Any such information, if stored, should be encrypted or protected by other means to avoid the possibility of unauthorized disclosure. Manually inputting sale invoices into the accounting application is an operational issue, if the POS system were to be interfaced with the financial accounting application, the overall efficiency could be improved. The nonavailability of optical scanners to read bar codes of the products and power outages are operational issues.
