What does the protocol field inside the PPP frame indicate?

- A. the protocol used to decode the FCS field
- B. the protocol used to carry the PPP frame
- C. the protocol used to detect the number of padding bytes
- D. the protocol used to identify the data in the Information field
- E. the protocol used to determine the authentication method

Answer: D

Explanation:

The Protocol field indicates the type of payload packet (e.g. LCP, NCP, IP, IPX, AppleTalk, etc.).

The Information field contains the PPP payload; it has a variable length with a negotiated maximum called the Maximum Transmission Unit. By default, the maximum is 1500 octets.

It might be padded on transmission; if the information for a particular protocol can be padded, that protocol must allow information to be distinguished from padding.
