NEW QUESTION: 2

Tara is using the Dojo Inline Edit builder to give the user editing capabilities to a Data Page field. She enabled the Allow Multiple Edits input in the builder. By default, the builder automatically cancels an ongoing edit in the current field if the user selects another field to edit. When automatic canceling is about to occur, the builder fires a client event named processInlineAutoCancel. Tara wants to provide feedback to the user that asks whether they wish to cancel their edits. How can she best accomplish this?

- A. She can use an Event Handler builder to capture the OnRequestComplete event and display a model using the Dojo Dialog builder.
- B. She can add a Client Event Handler builder that runs a script where she will set the continueAutoCancel field of the inlineEditState object to true or false based on the users response.
- C. She can use an Action List builder to set the value of the processInlineAutoCancel event and display a new page using a Page builder.
- D. She can use an HTML Event builder to capture the processInlineAutoCancel event of the field and Link To an Action that will display a popup.
