NEW QUESTION: 1

Users are connected to a database instance that is using Automatic Storage Management (ASM). The DBA executes the command as follows to shut down the ASM instance:

```
SQL> SHUTDOWN IMMEDIATE;
```

What happens to the database instance?

- A. It shuts down only after all pending transactions are completed and the ASM instance waits for this before shutting down.
- B. It stays open and SHUTDOWN command for the ASM instance fails.
- C. It shuts down long with the ASM instance.
- D. It is aborted and the ASM instance shuts down normally.

Answer: B

Explanation:

IMMEDIATE or TRANSACTIONAL Clause (link) Oracle ASM waits for any in-progress SQL to complete before performing an orderly dismount of all of the disk groups and shutting down the Oracle ASM instance. Oracle ASM does not wait for users currently connected to the instance to disconnect. If any database instances are connected to the Oracle ASM instance, then the SHUTDOWN command returns an error and leaves the Oracle ASM instance running. Because the Oracle ASM instance does not contain any transactions, the TRANSACTIONAL mode behaves the same as IMMEDIATE mode.
