Answer: B

NEW QUESTION: 2

Your newly appointed Cisco trainee wants to know how IPv6 manages to achieve subnetting.

What will your reply be?

- A. IPv4 compatible IPv6 addresses
- B. All of the above
- C. Site Level Aggregator in IPv6 addresses
- D. Subnetting is not permitted in IPv6
- E. Subnetworks are assigned by Public Authorities such as Internet Service Providers

Answer: C

Explanation:

The aggregatable global address typically consists of a 48-bit global routing prefix and a 16-bit subnet ID or Site-Level Aggregator (SLA). In the IPv6 aggregatable global unicast address format document (RFC 2374), the global routing prefix included two other hierarchically structured fields named Top-Level Aggregator (TLA) and Next-Level Aggregator (NLA). The IETF decided to remove the TLA and NLA fields from the RFCs because these fields are policy-based. Some existing IPv6 networks deployed before the change might still be using networks based on the older architecture.

A 16-bit subnet field called the Subnet ID could be used by individual organizations to create their own local addressing hierarchy and to identify subnets. A subnet ID is similar to a subnet in IPv4, except that an organization with an IPv6 subnet ID can support up to 65,535 individual subnets.

NEW QUESTION: 3

You want to migrate an on-premises Hadoop system to Cloud Dataproc. Hive is the primary tool in use, and the data format is Optimized Row Columnar (ORC). All ORC files have been successfully copied to a Cloud Storage bucket. You need to replicate some data to the cluster's local Hadoop Distributed File System (HDFS) to maximize performance. What are two ways to start using Hive in Cloud Dataproc?

(Choose two.)

A. Run the gsutil utility to transfer all ORC files from the Cloud Storage bucket to any node of the Dataproc cluster. Mount the Hive tables locally.

B. Run the gsutil utility to transfer all ORC files from the Cloud Storage bucket to the master node of the Dataproc cluster. Then run the Hadoop utility to copy them to HDFS. Mount the Hive tables from HDFS.

C. Leverage Cloud Storage connector for Hadoop to mount the ORC files as external Hive tables.

Replicate external Hive tables to the native ones.

D. Load the ORC files into BigQuery. Leverage BigQuery connector for Hadoop to mount the BigQuery tables as external Hive tables. Replicate external Hive tables to the native ones.

E. Run the gsutil utility to transfer all ORC files from the Cloud Storage bucket to HDFS. Mount the Hive tables locally.

Answer: A,B

Explanation:

HDFS lies on datanode, data on masternode needs to be copied on datanode.
