Given:

```
class Overloading {
int x(double d) {
System.out.println("one");
return 0;
}
String x(double d) { System.out.println("two");
return null;
}
double x(double d) {
```

```
System.out.println("three");
}
public static void main(String[] args) {
new Overloading().x(4.0)
}
}
```

What is the result?

- A. Three
- B. Compilation fails
- C. Two
- D. One

Answer: B

Explanation:

overloading of the x method fails as the input argument in all three cases are double. To use overloading of methods the argument types must be different.

Note: The Java programming language supports overloading methods, and Java can distinguish between methods with different method signatures. This means that methods within a class can have the same name if they have different parameter lists
